Mount Konocti is a dormant volcano, part of the Pacific Ring of Fire, and dating back to the Pliocene era nearly five million years ago. Geologists believe that Mount Konocti first erupted 350,000 years ago, and as recently as 10,000 years ago. Geothermal activity still abounds in the area.

Unlike traditional volcanoes, Mount Konocti has five peaks - Wright 4,299 ft., Howard 4,286 ft., South 4,050 ft., Buckingham 3,952 ft., and Clark 2,850 ft. The cones are composite didactic lava domes, the result of a series of non-explosive eruptions and lava flows.
